

The FCC should not implement any proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law protections.

The calls to my home have all but dropped off.

I recall getting about 5 or more calls a day before the Indiana law.

It was to the point of being afraid to answer the phone, as you generally have to be rude to end the call. Being rude is not in my nature or many others, and so you try to avoid the calls altogether.